My name is María Sanchez Dauder. My studies are Primary Teaching degrees: primary and English teacher at Universitat de Barcelona. Later, I got the Linguistics degree at Universitat de Barcelona. I am also Post graduated in Public Relations and Protocol at Universitat Oberta de Catalunya. After that, I studied a University DEGREE in Intelligence Development, Superior Ability and Neuropsychology at Camilo José Cela University. Right now I'm studying a master about Psicopedagogy at Unicersitat Oberta de Catalunya. I'm an eternal learner and I think that I will never stop studying and learning. I am already thinking about my next master. This is me. I am a versatile, creative and proactive person. This is why I've got many jobs at the same time. On the one hand, I'm an English teacher in a Primary school. On the other hand, I am a University professor of the Faculty of Philology at Linguistics Degree. Moreover I'm a writer, I have more than 17 books published in Spanish and Catalan; I spend my free time writing books for students with high abilities, what we call gifted; All the talk about gifted characters and my aim is that the readers can connect to them; in addition, all these books can be used at home and in class to work curricular contents. As I have said before, I work in different jobs; I am also a speaker in congresses about innovation in education and about gifted students. My speeches talk about how to teach in an inclusive classroom with gifted students. Finally, in 2018 I founded Correquevelas, www.correquevelas.com, a gifted consultancy to help and assist teachers and families. I work with a Psychologist and we evaluate children capacities: intelligence and creativity, and we work with their families and teachers to get the best of our patient at home and at school.
